

4 What's Good for a 4-Year-Old

Fours love to pretend and to tell tall tales. Nursery rhymes, silly language, and nonsense riddles are fun for them, and they may want to make up their own. They like to hear stories repeated and often memorize words to a favorite book, which they can then “read.” Asking your child “what happens next?” as you read a story will help him to build language skills. Fours are curious about the real world around them and will be eager for non-fiction about nature or a subject that interests them. Have lots of story sessions and conversations with your curious, imaginative four-year-old!
